Interviewer: Hello, thank you very much for helping us. We are investigating how students save and find content on social media to understand what things actually work for them and what things end up being difficult to maintain [1]. There are no right or wrong answers; we want to know about your experience [1]. So, to start, tell me a bit about what a normal week is like for you using social media, which apps you use the most, and why [1].

Interviewee: Well, during my week I use social media for entertainment [1]. Usually, when I take a break, it's to see what has happened during the day [1].

Interviewer: Within this routine, at what point do you usually find something you want to save for later? [2].

Interviewee: At what point? When I find information that I feel is going to be important for the moment I have to do a project [2].

Interviewer: Okay. And when you find something you like and want to save it, what do you normally do to save it? [2].

Interviewee: Mm, usually the apps have an option to save it to watch later and I use that tool [2].

Interviewer: Uh, do you never take screenshots or directly download the video or take notes about the video in case you have to search for it? [2].

Interviewee: No, in general, I don't usually do that [3].

Interviewer: Okay. Uh, can you think of a time when you looked for something you had saved on social media and couldn't find it or considered it completely lost? What happened? [3].

Interviewee: Mm, well, that actually happened to me once and what I did was go to another app to search for similar information and it worked [3].

Interviewer: Okay. And how was the whole process from when you saved that until the moment you tried to search for the video again? What was saved and why? How much time passed between saving it and searching for it again? Where did you try to look first? What worked? Did you find it or did you give up? [3].

Interviewee: M, well, I had saved a post about Gram-positive cocci on Instagram [4]. However, when I needed that information, I realized that account had been deleted, so I went to Pinterest and the same information was there and it worked for me [4].

Interviewer: Okay. Was there ever a moment where you thought, "I should organize this," but in the end, you didn't? Meaning, writing down the information or organizing some aspects, but you gave up? And what stopped you? [4].

Interviewee: Hm. Yes. I don't usually do that because I feel that I run out of time, so it's just to save it, but in reality, I also feel like I don't use it much [4].

Interviewer: Okay. Uh, at that moment, what did you need the most? To find it quickly, to have a place, to remember why you had saved it, or something different? [5].

Interviewee: Uh, finding it quickly [5].

Interviewer: Okay. Uh, have you ever tried using folders, notes, bookmarks, or an app to organize what you save on social media? [5].

Interviewee: No, actually, I haven't [5].

Interviewer: Uh, did you ever do it or manage to keep it organized for several days or weeks? [5].

Interviewee: M, I tried once on Pinterest, however, that didn't last at all [5].

Interviewer: Uh, why did you stop using it? What does "it was no use" mean to you? [5].

Interviewee: Because it was no use in the sense that I didn't go back into the app to look for that content [5].

Interviewer: Okay. And is there an app you use almost every day without anyone having to remind you? [5].

Interviewee: Yes, Instagram and TikTok [6].

Interviewer: Uh, what do you think it is? What makes it easy to go back to that app? [6].

Interviewee: Mm, I think it's knowing what other people have posted [6].

Interviewer: Okay. But what other hooks do the apps have to keep you there? [6].

Interviewee: Uh, for example, I don't watch TV, so I feel that through social media I find out about everything that's happening [6].

Interviewer: Okay. Have you ever downloaded an app to save, organize content, notes, bookmarks, something like Notion, Pocket or similar? [6].

Interviewee: Yes. I don't use mentions, however, I use Google Docs, which is where I work and organize; it's the only way I organize my folders by thematic content [7].

Interviewer: Uh, for example, have you ever used Notion? [7].

Interviewee: Yes [7].

Interviewer: And what happened after you downloaded it? [7].

Interviewee: I didn't like it [7]. I felt, or maybe I didn't understand the app, but it seemed very disorganized to me, like I couldn't find the order in it [7].

Interviewer: Okay. And what made you stop logging in? Just the disorganization or other reasons, or did you find a simpler app to use? [7].

Interviewee: Uh, yes, I found a simpler app and it was Google Docs [8].

Interviewer: Okay. When you want to find something you saved, how should the tool feel so that you actually want to open it? What should that app have so that you truly want to use it again? [8].

Interviewee: Mm, what should it have? I think at the start it shouldn't have all that app introduction, but rather get straight to the point, like having my folders right there, so I enter and see everything at once, like Samsung Notes [8].

Interviewer: Yes, something like that [9]. For you, it must be fast, simple, with a search engine [9].

Interviewee: Yes, correct [9].

Interviewer: Uh, would you also like to talk to something to help you find those things you are saving? [9].

Interviewee: M, it's a good idea [9]. That would be cool [9].

Interviewer: Imagine you find a tool that gathers everything you save on any social network and helps you find it in seconds [9]. What would have to happen for you to want to use it again the next day? [9].

Interviewee: Mm, what would have to happen? I think as I mentioned before, it should be simple [9]. The truth is that things like that, which are quite complicated, stress me out [9].

Interviewer: Okay. And would it motivate you to see how much content you have organized? [10].

Interviewee: No [10].

Interviewer: Receiving reminders of things you saved a long time ago? [10].

Interviewee: No [10].

Interviewer: Receiving automatic summaries? [10].

Interviewee: No [10].

Interviewer: Maintaining a usage streak like Duolingo? [10].

Interviewee: No [10].

Interviewer: Recommendations based on your own notes? [10].

Interviewee: M... [10].

Interviewer: There are apps that use streaks, levels, points, rewards. Would that make keeping your content organized more entertaining? [10].

Interviewee: No, I feel that as long as the app is simple, that's enough, and organized [10].

Interviewer: Would you prefer what you save to be completely private or would it make sense to share certain collections with friends? [11].

Interviewee: Yes, I would like them to be shareable [11].

Interviewer: What things would you never share? [11].

Interviewee: Mm, I think things that involve my privacy [11]. For example, what I have to do tomorrow [11]. Yes, like things I feel people shouldn't know about me [11].

Interviewer: Do you usually save things like medical records or something like that? [11].

Interviewee: Yes [11].

Interviewer: Okay. Uh, when you feel you already have too much saved or disorganized, how do you know the time has come to do something about it? [11].

Interviewee: Mm, when I look for something and don't find it, then I get desperate and delete everything to start in an organized way, however, I haven't been able to [12].

Interviewer: Okay. If you wanted to organize everything from scratch, would you know exactly where to start? [12].

Interviewee: No [12].

Interviewer: How difficult or easy would it be to do? [12].

Interviewee: Difficult, honestly [12]. I'm a person who gets bored doing that [12].

Interviewer: What could make taking that first step easier? [12].

Interviewee: I think I'd like an app to have that ease of being able to do it [12]. I think that would be the only way [12].

Interviewer: What do you mean by that ease of being able to do it? [13].

Interviewee: Mm, like it helps me organize things, so that I don't have to do it from scratch [13]. For example, in Canva one uses artificial intelligence to give you a base for a presentation [13]. So I would also like it if this tool is created, that it gives me a base... for example, I could tell it "I want to organize folders by subjects," then it creates a base and I say if I like the idea [13].

Interviewer: Meaning, reviewing all your notes to organize them? [14].

Interviewee: Not necessarily, but also before being able to organize, telling it how I would like it to be organized [14].

Interviewer: Okay. Uh, what would an app need to have for you to trust that your saved content, notes, transcripts, tags are safe and private? [14].

Interviewee: Mm, I think it would need to have an affiliation with Google to feel safe [14].

Interviewer: Okay. Imagine you could have a tool on your cell phone that automatically organized everything you save on social networks. What technical functionalities would you like it to do for you? [14].

Interviewee: Mm, I would like it to give me notifications about what's happening at the moment... like news [15].

Interviewer: But only regarding what you have saved? [15].

Interviewee: Oh, no, not with what I have saved [15].

Interviewer: Suppose two weeks ago you saved a video with a recipe, an idea you liked, and now you need to open the app. What would you like to happen in the next 30 seconds? [15].

Interviewee: Uh, for example, I think if I entered the saved folder it would ask me for specific words and then the organized content would appear [15].

Interviewer: Okay. Of all those things, if you could keep one, which is the most important? What other functionality would you like to apply? [16].

Interviewee: Mm. Actually, at this moment, no other comes to mind [16].

Interviewer: Okay, so let's move to the next question. What would an app like that have to do so that after a week you don't end up forgetting it? [16].

Interviewee: Mm, I think it's not difficult [17]. For example, I'm thinking of it from an academic perspective and the only way I'd be there is because I need to organize my notes [17].

Interviewer: Okay. Is there anything about how you save or organize content that you think is important and I didn't ask? [17].

Interviewee: No [17].

Interviewer: If you could change just one thing about how you save or find content on social media, what would you change? [17].

Interviewee: Actually, what I mentioned: making a much simpler, easier search [17].

Interviewer: Okay, done. Thank you very much [18].

Interviewee: M [18].
